

The Mercurian Times
Official Editorial Board & Podcast Society
Department of Commerce, Jesus and Mary College
Seminar Event Report
‘Sustainable Success: Health Management for the Modern Professional’

Date: 6th April, 2026

Time: 10.30 - 11.30 AM

Venue: G06

Resource Person: Dr. Divya, Associate Dean, IIHRM Delhi

No. of Attendees: 50-60

The Mercurian Times successfully organized an insightful seminar titled "Sustainable Success: Health Management for the Modern Professional," featuring Dr. Divya, Associate Dean and Associate Professor at IIHRM Delhi. The session was specifically curated for third-year and final-year students exploring specialized career branches in healthcare and public health management. Dr. Divya brought over 18 years of extensive experience in academia, research, and training within health systems. As an expert in organizational behavior and capacity building, she has led numerous institutional achievements, making her a distinguished voice in public health management.

The seminar opened with a comprehensive introduction to the evolving landscape of the health sector. Dr. Divya emphasized that healthcare management is no longer restricted to those with a medical background; a key takeaway was that students from any bachelor's background are eligible to enroll in masters programs at IIHRM. The discussion covered several critical domains and specialized pathways, including Hospital Management, Health IT Management, Pharmaceutical Management and Health Management.

Key discussion points consisted of various facets ranging from National Initiatives, Global Connectivity and Career Outcomes. The session delved into the impact of Ayushman Bharat and the rapid growth of online and digital public health platforms, highlighting how technology is reshaping the industry. Dr. Divya went on to highlight IIHRM's various global tie-ups, which provide students with international exposure. The seminar showcased the high employability within this sector. Top recruiters from IIHRM including EY, Deloitte, PwC, Max, and UNICEF were identified as organizations providing successful, high-achieving career opportunities for graduates.

The event turned out to be a truly enriching experience for students, offering them valuable insights into the wide range of opportunities within the healthcare sector. By effectively connecting general undergraduate education with specialized management pathways, the seminar helped clarify important career options. It empowered students with the knowledge and confidence needed to make thoughtful and informed decisions about their future professional journeys.

Key Points:

1. Clarification that the masters program is open to students of all academic backgrounds.
2. In-depth look at digital health platforms and government schemes.
3. Exploration of niche fields like Health IT and Pharma Management.
4. Identification of top-tier global firms and NGOs recruiting in the health management space.
5. Emphasis on the intersection of organizational behavior and public health for long-term career success.