CULINARY CULTURES: READING FOOD, CONSUMING LITERATURE

SPEAKERS

PROF. ANITA MANNUR

Anita Mannur is professor of English at Miami University, USA. She is author of Intimate Eating: Racialized Spaces, Radical Futures (Duke UP 2022) and Culinary Fictions: Food in South Asian Diasporic Culture (Temple UP 2010).

PROF. DORIS WITT

Doris Witt is a professor in the English department at the University of Iowa, where she teaches classes in 20th-21st century American and transnational and postcolonial literature. Her current food-themed project, The Culinary Catch-22, is a cultural study of American food writing during the neoliberal era.

PROF. PARAMA ROY

Parama Roy is Professor Emerita of English at the University of California, Davis. She is the author of Indian Traffic: Identities in Question in Colonial and Postcolonial India (UC Press, 1998) and Alimentary Tracts: Appetites, Aversions, and the Postcolonial (Duke UP, 2010), and co-editor of States of Trauma: Gender and Violence in South Asia (Zubaan, 2009). Her current book project, on the economies (and aneconomies) of sacrifice across human and other than human worlds in the nineteenth- and twentieth-century Britain and its empire, is titled "Species, Sacrifice, and the Question of Empire."
